Report from Israel

Art, Like Politics, is Serious Business

By Murry S. Greenfield

The tumult and the shouting of the art camps in Israel reminds one that art, like politics in this country, is taken very seriously. The fighting words in the coffee houses and newspaper columns are from those who are for and those who are against the Twenty Three.

The Twenty Three are the artists chosen by William Seitz, associate curator of New York's Museum of Modern Art, for a traveling show in American museums this winter and the spring of '65. The show was previewed here in Israel with shows in Jerusalem, Tel Aviv and other centers. The kick-off in America was at the Jewish Museum in New York.

The Twenty Three were chosen after Seitz had examined the work of over 700 Israeli artists in the homeland, as well as in Paris, New York and other cities. The artists finally selected represent no one group, style or stratum of reputation. Several of Israel's most prominent and accomplished masters are not represented.

While this exhibition is of Israeli rather than Jewish art, Jewish culture and experience are nevertheless profoundly embodied in many of the works. A major work in the show is a glowing triptych "Missa Dura" by Mordechai Ardon, which gives expression to the mysticism, hopes, suffering and life of Europe remembered and modern Israel.

Ardon's student Naphtali Bezem is represented by works, the central theme of which is "Aliah," the return of the immigrants to the land. His symbols of the lion, the wheel, menorah, ladder and torah scroll give plastic form to the unfolding of life from death, freedom from oppression. The biblical struggles of man are evident in Moshe Tamir's work.

The "Twenty Three" exhibit shows important abstract landscapes by Mairovich, Stematsky, Wexler, Streichman, and Zaritsky. In perfect counter-point to these canvases are the brilliant, realistic drawings in the show, of the Judean Hills by Anna Ticho. Sculpture in Israel tends to the monumental. The sculptors tend to think of their sculpture merging with landscape and architecture. Itzhak Danziger's "Sheep in the Negev" is both sculpture and shelter. Shamai Haber wants to create sculptured desert towns rather than "little sculptures on pedestals."

The metal sculpture of Yigal Tumarkin and Yehiel Shemi recalls war and victory. And Kossu Elul looks to penetrate massive primary forms, as columns, alters, gates, cairns and stele. Seitz has included several young artists of promise who are working with the newest international trends and artistic problems of vision, movement, spectator participation, machine techniques, and assemblage.

City Of Hope, 'Chai Club' Affair Readied

Each member will be presented a gift with the "chai" symbol. Proceeds raised in the event will be sent to the National City of Hope for further research in diseases in which the medical center specializes.

Chairmen for the event are Ann Birnbaum, Rose Neubauber and Vettie Bornstein.

Matzoh To Be Short In Russia For Passover

London (WNS) Informed sources here state that this Passover too there will be a shortage of matzoh for the religious Jews of Soviet Russia, though the shortage will not be quite as acute as that of last year. Thus far matzoh baking has been permitted only at three ovens in three synagogues in the Moscow area and one in Leningrad, where there is no organized matzoh baking and each individual must bring his own flour. No matzoh baking permits have been granted either in Kiev or Riga.

At the same time the Soviet press is issuing warnings to people against accepting matzoh gift packages from abroad. One writer in a Minsk newspaper claims that some Soviet Jews have been receiving such gift packages and then sold them to others.

Meanwhile, the Board of Deputies of British Jews this week decided to convene a conference of various Jewish organizations to discuss the position of Soviet Jewry. The conference will take place on April 8.

The couple is making preparation for a year abroad.

New President and Speaker

Educator Calls Us

'White Protestant American Jews'

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "We are becoming a bunch of White Protestant American Jews," the national convention of B'nai B'rith Women were told here.

Dr. Harold Weisberg, dean of the graduate faculty of Brandeis University, made the statement. He declared that "American Judaism has accepted the values of the dominant culture, of the 'Sunday religion' and imitates Protestant churches which have made the most compromises with daily life."

Dr. Weisberg conceded that

Judaism will survive but confessed he is worried about "the quality of the survival."

Rabbi Norman E. Frimer, New York Metropolitan director of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations, told the women that "We must stop telling our youth that we're just like everybody else. 'If we are different,' he said, 'then we must make that difference worthwhile.'"

Mrs. Arthur G. Rosenbluth, of Hewlett, L.I., was elected president.

Rabbinical Court Is Overruled on Divorce

TEL AVIV — The District Court here has overruled a decision of the Rabbinical High Court on the Jewishness of Mrs. Eva Bassan. The District Court awarded her temporary maintenance of $233 a month pending a divorce and final settlement.

THE RABBINICAL COURT had ruled that Mrs. Bassan must accept a divorce by proxy from her husband without alimony on the grounds that it was doubtful she was Jewish.

If Mrs. Bassan were not Jewish then the rabbinical court had no jurisdiction, the District Court ruled.

THE COURT DID NOT rule on Mrs. Bassan's Jewishness. It had been alleged she had been baptized in Italy during World War II. She denied the allegation, asserting that her parents were Hungarian Jews and she had no recollection of ever having been baptized.

Judge Y. Lamm did however express an opinion. He said he was convinced Mrs. Bassan was Jewish and even if in order to save her life she had been baptized, a Jew remains a Jew especially if he himself is convinced that he is.

Rabbis, Lay Leaders Flock to Montgomery

Rabbis from all parts of the United States were flocking to Alabama to take part in the 5-day march from Selma to the state capital at Montgomery.

A place of honor in the front line went to Dr. Abraham Joshua Heschel, who was separated as the march started on Sunday only by Ralph Bunche from Martin Luther King.

FOLLOWING BEHIND were Orthodox, Conservative and Reform rabbis and laymen from almost every state in the union.

Rabbi Maurice Eisendrath, president of the Reform Union of American Hebrew Congregations, was to lead a delegation of Reform rabbis Thursday, the last day of the March.

Meanwhile Jewish lay organizations were joining in the march. Benjamin R. Epstein, national director of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, led a contingent of his officials, and the American Jewish Committee called on its chapters and membership to participate in the march.

THE COMMITTEE'S Harry Fleischman, its race relations coordinator, led its delegation on the march Wednesday and Thursday.

Micheal Kaufman, chairman of the Commission on Civil Rights of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America was to lead an Orthodox delegation in the march Wednesday and Thursday. His assistants were Rabbis Emanuel Foreman, of Brookline, Mass., and Meyer Strassfeld, of Dorchester, Mass.

Even from Canada came Rabbi Eugene Weiner, of Hamilton, Ontario, to join in the protests and march.

ABRAHAM JOSHUA HESCHEL
Place of Honor

THE LIST OF rabbis in the march continued to grow daily. Those who had been in Selma and who participated in the march included:

Orthodox: Rabbi Saul Ber- man, Berkeley, Calif., who was jailed; Rabbi Harold Konovitch, New Kensington, Penn.; Rabbi Abraham Pelberg, St. Louis.

Conservative: Rabbi Wolfe Kelman, New York; Richard L. Rubenstein, U. of Pittsburgh Hillel; Rabbi Jack Schechter, Baltimore, and Shammai Kanter, Sharon, Mass.

Reform: Joseph Weinberg and Harvey Fields, Hebrew Union College, San Francisco; Sanford Rosen, San Mateo, Calif.; Bruce Ehrmann, Brockton, Mass.; Arnold Wolf and Marc Shapiro, Chicago; David Polish, Evanston, Ill.; Kenneth Rifkind and Samuel Cohen, Livingston, N. Y.; Irwin Fishbein, Elizabeth, N.J.; Andre Ungar, Newark, Stanley Yedwab, Lakewood, N.J.; Joseph Gumbner, Berkeley, who was arrested but not jailed, Maurice Davis, Indianapolis; Norbert Samuelson, Indiana University Hillel Foundation; Albert Friedlander, Columbia University; Gerald Raikin, and Albert Goldman, of Cincinnati.

Kivie Kaplan, of Boston, a veteran leader in the NAACP, and Al Vorspan, of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, also took part in the Montgomery march.

THE RABBIS IN jail last Friday evening conducted services in their cell, Saturday afternoon, after their release, they joined their colleagues in a havdalah service on the lawn in front of Brown Chapel, headquarters for the demonstrators. Over 600 Negroes and whites, Jewish and non-Jews joined in the impromptu havdalah services for one of the most unique of its kind in history.

Rabbi Richard L. Rubenstein, of the University of Pittsburgh, Hillel Foundation, who led a group of 135 students from the Pittsburgh area colleges, narrowly escaped injury when the police on horseback rode roughshod through the students swinging their clubs. Several were rushed to the hospital, but all were released after treatment.

Want to Bury Them

Return Asked of Shades Made From Jewish Skin

FRANKFURT — Germans who have lampshades made from skins of Jews have been asked by the Central Council of German Jews to yield them up for proper burial.

THE COUNCIL said that "it was high time these bodily remains were returned so they can be buried properly according to Jewish Law."

Prof. Herbert Lewin, Council chairman, said in a statement: "We know there still are many such items in possession of families here in Germany. Naturally this is not to say that each person who has such a thing took part in mass murders.

"On the contrary, many of them had nothing to do with such things but came by the articles quite by chance."

RABBI MEETS HIS STUDENTS

AUSTIN, Tex. — Rabbi Hyman Judah Schachtel of Temple Beth Israel (Reform) in Houston met with 33 students, sons and daughters of members of his congregations, who are attending the University of Texas here. After a brief worship service, followed by dinner at the Hotel Gondolier, the group heard a talk by their rabbi.

Is Assimilation Trend Slowed?

Don't Be Fearful,
Confab Is Told

WASHINGTON — A Call for Jewish groups to "speak out for what we believe" without fear of antagonizing other groups or aggravating anti-Jewish feeling, was issued here by a Jewish leader.

Aaron Goldman, chairman of the National Community Relations Advisory Council, told the biennial convention of the American Jewish Congress National Women's Division that "substantial differences in opinion between the Jewish community and other groups are not injurious to Jewish status or security."

"OVER THE PAST 15 years,"

he said, "we have often been in the minority in our insistence that religion must be kept separate from public education. Yet we have achieved not only vindication in the courts but, in time, a considerable measure of support from other religious groups."

The sessions also heard of "unmistakable signs of a new curiosity about Jewish values and a growing desire among young Jewish mothers to raise a more informed and aware Jewish generation."

This view was expressed by Mrs. Martin Steinberg, of Brooklyn, president of the Women's Division.

"This stirring," she told the 600 women attending the convention, "has encouraged us to believe that the disheartening trend toward assimilation and alienation from things Jewish may at last be reversing itself."

Too American For Israelis

'How to Succeed' A Flop

TEL AVIV — After a run of only six weeks, "How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying," will be closed here. The producers are taking a $2,000 loss nightly, not to mention the $133,000 production costs.

Theatre goers explain the uncommon lack of interest of Israel's sophisticated audiences in the American hit on grounds that the play with its satire on American corporation in-fighting techniques can't be appreciated by foreign audiences.

At the same time it was learned that Jerome Robbins choreographer for "Fiddler on The Roof" is coming to Israel to work on the Hebrew-language production of the musical comedy which went into rehearsal this week.

Oranges Cheaper

Supersol
Won't Hike
Its Prices

TEL AVIV — The American-owned chain of supermarkets, Supersol, is refusing to bow to the Citrus Marketing Board's ruling that it raise the price of oranges it is selling. The Board has set a price of 23 cents for two kilograms and Supersol is selling them for three cents less.

The Board warned Supersol that it would refuse to sell oranges to the chain, but manager Harry Taxin is standing his ground.

Dr. Julius Weissbarg, of the Board, explained that if Supersol continues to use oranges as a "price leader" other retailers would refuse to sell them, thus causing the entire citrus industry to suffer.

But Not One Objection

Fund-Raising Affair
At Club Barring Jews

INDIANAPOLIS — Almost no protest whatsoever has been made here over the holding of a Jewish Welfare Fund banquet at a country club which bans Jews.

The fund-raising affair at which Mayor Briscoe of Dublin was speaker was held at the Meridian Hills Country Club because the local Jewish country club is undergoing renovation. The Meridian Hills Club had advised Broadmoor Country Club officials that they were welcome to use its facilities while the Jewish club was being remodelled.

Frank Newman, director of the Federation, Rabbi Sidney Steiman, chairman of the Indianapolis Jewish Community Relations Council and Ben Domont president of the Jewish Welfare Federation, had nothing but praise for the action of the Meridian Hills Club.

That Meridian Hills does not admit Jews as members was ascertained a few years ago when the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith made a nationwide survey on bias in country clubs.

Teacher Equating Hitler
With Christ Keeps Job

MONTREAL — Canada was shocked as it was learned that a teacher in a Catholic school had hung a picture of Hitler and a swastika on the classroom blackboard, comparing Hitler to Christ in "great" leadership.

The Montreal Catholic School Commission ordered an investigation of the practice, which included organizing the pupils into Nazi-like military cadres which included "SS men." The teacher, twenty-two-year-old Brother Rene Lahaie, was also alleged to have taught his seventh-grade pupils to hallow Jesus with a "Heil Christ" chant.

The Jewish community was stunned by the incident and even more by the fact that neither the director of the school, Brother Asselin, nor the Commission's director of teaching, Jean-Marie Mathieu, had taken exception to the practice beyond ordering removal of the offensive Hitler picture. Brother Asselin said he was baffled at "the sudden interest" in the teacher's methods. The other official asserted that the teacher's "intentions were good" but that "the procedure itself is certainly extraordinary and open to criticism."

Finkelstein Sees White Control End

MIAMI BEACH — The hour of dominance of the white race is almost over," Rabbi Louis Finkelstein, chancellor of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America told an audience here.

"The white men are not a superior race destined to rule mankind forever," Dr. Finkelstein asserted, "and the hour of our dominance is almost over."

The Conservative Leader paid tribute to the Negro wisdom which has enabled him to survive under oppression.

Although the poor nations of the world may be inexperienced in the art of government and statehood, Chancellor Finkelstein said, "they are not lacking in types of wisdom which we no longer respect, and which, when we come into contact with them, we help destroy and eradicate. How could the Negro have survived among us, in such humiliation as we imposed on him for 300 years, unless he possessed a type of wisdom of which we know nothing? How could the Hindus in India, and the vast majority of Negroes in America, have learned to practice the art of passive resistance, so strange in our way of thought, had there not been in them a strain of human wisdom which the Prophets vainly tried to inculcate in us?"

The worldwide revolution in which the ruling western civilization is "necessarily and reluctantly" losing its control to the one-time subject peoples of the world, is inevitable and "may be accepted not as an overthrow of religion, but as its fulfillment," declared Dr. Finkelstein.

"IT HAPPENS THAT Occidental man, so long dominant in human affairs and now compelled, whether he likes it or not, to share his power with the formerly subject peoples, or even to submit to their dominance, is almost wholly Caucasian, i.e., unpigmented," Dr. Louis Finkelstein, said.

"There is thus developing," Rabbi Finkelstein asserted, "a new struggle between the pigmented people of the world and the unpigmented, a struggle in which the unpigmented, so long in control of industry, of science, of knowledge, experienced in government and in politics, and accustomed to impose their will on all people of the planet, are necessarily and reluctantly about to yield their power to their former subjects, or, as the phrase now goes, colonials. . . What a better world would be looming for us had we taken seriously the first chapter of Genesis, which asserts that man is made in the Divine image — not the white man alone, but the black man, the brown man, the red man, and the yellow man."

Israel Official Blames China

MONTREAL — Russia nor the United States want war in the Middle East — but interference from Red China, a new factor in the Middle East, may be emboldening Nasser.

This was the view expressed here by David Rivlin, Israel consul-General for Montreal.

It is China's intrusion that encourages Nasser and keeps issues at a boiling point in the Middle East Rivlin told a conference of the Montreal Histadrut campaign.

Smoke To Rise From Realistic Memorial

TEL AVIV — A memorial will be erected here to those who died at Treblinka, so realistic that smoke will rise from it recalling the burned bodies of Jews in the infamous concentration camp.

To cost $25,000, the memorial will begin with a path leading to a crematorium. The lane will be flanked by barbed wire and will contain 25 huge stones giving the impression that they are Jews being driven to the ovens. The crematorium itself will be built of 24 gigantic basalt boulders, each weighing 8 to 10 tons.

Mourners who wish to light a memorial may enter the crematorium, which will have a hole in the ceiling permitting the black smoke to escape, giving the impression of a real crematorium in action.

Friction Bars Formal Body Of Orthodox

LONDON — The expected formal organization of world Orthodoxy at the Conference of European Orthodox Rabbis here did not materialize because of suspicion between right wing and neo Orthodox rabbis.

Rabbi Israel Brodie, Chief Rabbi of Great Britain, explained however that one of the aims of the conference was to make "the voice of Orthodox Judaism heard and heeded by Jewish global organizations".

THE CONFERENCE heard a charge that the growth of intermarriage was almost in direct proportion to the growth of the Liberal and Reform Movements. The allegation was made by Dr. I. Rapaport, of Melbourne.

Other speakers claimed that the ease with which Reform and Conservative Judaism treated converts to Judaism was to blame for the increasing danger of illegitimacy.

IN A REPORT on conditions in South Africa Jewry, Rabbi B. M. Casper asserted that the growth of the Reform Movement there had been halted.

A call to the rabbis to regain their lost position in the Jewish community was made by Rabbi B. Bergman, of America. He declared that "Power is not given, it has to be taken".

AT ANOTHER POINT in the discussion, Rabbi Jeno Schuck, of Hungary, one of the two iron curtain rabbis in attendance, challenged rabbis who could not be recognized as such on sight. A rabbi, he said according to The Jewish Chronicle of London, ought to be immediately recognized by his looks and attire.

When Dayan Swift of London called upon his colleagues to adopt stronger measures against those who transgressed Jewish law, he evoked murmurs of dissent. He asserted that those who married not in accordance with Jewish law or who refused to abide by the Jewish divorce procedure should be cut off completely from the Orthodox community. He would not allow them burial in Orthodox cemeteries. He added that those whose bodies were cremated should be banned from burial in Jewish cemeteries.

Rabbi Raskas Wonders

Would Jobs Go To These Applicants?

ST. PAUL — Rabbi Bernard S. Raskas wondered out loud in his Temple of Aaron Bulletin this past week whether "if the true qualifications of an applicant for a job were stated for a position in Jewish life, would he be hired?"

He then asked his congregants if they could guess the names of the following applicants from these qualifications:

1. I am over eighty. I have not gotten along well with the secular leaders of the community. Some have accused me of hallucinations. I have a bad temper and when things don't go my way I smash all sorts of objects. I have fixed principles and I never vary from them.

2. I am a farm boy and all I know is how to take care of sheep. I tend to be very outspoken and critical of government policies. Sometimes I can't help myself and I comment on women's fashions, labor policies and violations of the Sabbath. When I feel the need to speak, I do so and I care not for the consequences. I believe God speaks to me.

3. I have some peculiar personal habits. I day dream a great deal and I often ignore current teachings in the university. I never cut my hair and I probably smoke too much. When I am bored, I ignore everybody and I play the violin. I have a feeling that some of my theories are way ahead of the times.

4. I am a doctor and I have a new theory of how to cure personal problems. All I do is sit and listen to people talk. I don't give out any pills and I offer little advice. I have many theories about sex, dreams and the meaning of life. When I express them, people are often shocked. But, I have to tell the truth at all times.

5. I have many personal idiosyncracies. I hate to wear a tie even at formal receptions. I think owning a lot of property or money is nonsense. I like best living on a frontier and working with my hands. When I get bored, I read Greek or study eastern cultures. I think every Jew ought to live in Israel.

6. I cannot type and I cannot take shorthand, but I won a beauty contest. I am rather indifferent to Jewish problems but when I am faced with responsibilities I usually assume them. People find me easy to get along with and generally I am liked. My only problem is that my uncle keeps telling me what to do.

Rabbi Raskas said the applicants would be (1) Moses, (2) Amos, (3) Albert Einstein, (4) Sigmund Freud, (5) Ben-Gurion and (6) Esther.

Allocation of Function Procedure Is Changed

NEW YORK — The entrance of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith has resulted in one important change in the procedures of the National Community Relations Advisory Council.

The new departure involves allocation of function.

Heretofore the agency with most experience in a field usually was assigned to tackle tasks in that area. Under the new rule there is no allocation of function on a sustained basis. The assignment is now on a case to case basis. The POST and OPINION has learned.

A responsible authority explained to The P-O that there is no longer any primacy of allocation.

Drives Ahead By $2,636,000

NEW YORK — An increase of $2,636,000 in proceeds of spring campaigns for the United Jewish Appeal over 1964 has been reported by 97 communities, it was announced here. The figures do not include New York City whose drive is just getting underway.

FIGURES SHOW $25,334,000 raised to date as against $22,698,000 at this time last year.

Although general chairman

Max M. Fisher, of Detroit, termed the results "most encouraging", veteran campaigners realize that in all campaigns first figures do not necessarily represent final totals since those who give increases usually announce their contributions early.

No figures on the separate drive to raise funds for secondary schools in Israel were announced.

New Group To Foster Jewish Art

NEW YORK — A hole in Jewish cultural life in the United States was filled here with formation of the National Council for Art in Jewish Life.

DESIGNED TO stimulate interest in Jewish art, the organizing conference was attended by representatives of 12 national Jewish agencies, art galleries, artists and art critics. The meeting was convened by the American Jewish Congress' Paul Vishny, chairman of the organization's Commission on Jewish Affairs.

In stating the case for the new body, the organization said that "Many of us have become increasingly concerned about the quality of art in Jewish life and the lack of suitable communication between the artist and the consumer. Above all, we feel the need to improve the quality of this art; to intensify the effort to bring new art and new artists to public recognition; and creatively improve objects and works of art both for private and public display."

NAMED TEMPORARY chairman was Rabbi Moshe Davidowitz of the Conservative Movement's Commission on Art in the Synagogue, while Mr. Schatz was named temporary secretary.

WHAT FOODS THESE MORSELS BE

Time To Collect Passover Recipes

By SARAH LIEBER

Time once again to start collecting recipes for Passover. With the first Seder just a few weeks away, the balabosta has plenty to do by way of preparation.

Again this year I repeat my advice to sit down with pencil and paper and make lists of various kinds. One can be for the spring cleaning chores which must be done within the next couple of weeks. Another will take into account the inventory of Passover pots, pans and tableware and list items which must be replaced or supplemented. Of course, there is always a large list of grocers' items and orders to the fishman and butcher.

All merchants will appreciate having those orders in early. Some of them will even sell you fish for the holiday at lower current prices and will freeze it for you in their special Kosher for Passover lockers. You might inquire.

I have just received some excellent Pesachdiche recipes from the Standard Brands Kitchens. These have been tested and tasted. They will add much to your reputation as a cook. Clip them and file for yomtov use.

STUFFED CHREMSLACH

4 eggs
Two-thirds cup water
2 tbsps. Planter's Peanut Oil

Beat eggs; add water, 2 tablespoons of oil, sugar, salt, pepper and ginger. Beat again until well blended. Stir in matzo meal. Refrigerate ½ hour or more. Divide mixture in half. On a board lightly sprinkled with matzo meal, roll out half of the dough to about ¼ inch thickness. Cut 10 circles, using ¾ inch round cutter. Fill with either of the fillings (recipes below). Roll out remaining dough; cut circles and top filled circles. Seal edges firmly. Fry in about ¼ inch of oil at medium heat. Fry meat filled chremslach 15 to 20 minutes. Fruit filled ones fry until golden brown. Drain on absorbent paper. Meat chremslach should be served hot. Fruit filled ones may be either hot or cold.

India Bars Delegate To Rotary

Raghava Rao, who was to attend the conference as representative of the Central Indian Rotary, cancelled his trip at the behest of the Indian authorities.

Warhaftig Explains

Why State And Religion Are Joined

JERUSALEM — The problem of a Jewish state and its religion was explained by Minister for Religious Affairs, Dr. Zerach Warhaftig, who told the Knesset that Israel would be split irrevocably in two if the state and the religious establishment were to be separated.

OUTLINING this view, Warhaftig said that many non-observant members of other parties accepted this appraisal.

Dr. Warhaftig, asserted that he believed in freedom of religion for each and every individual, but this did not mean that there were not boundaries beyond which a person could go and still remain a Jew.

THE HEAD of the National Religious Party asserted that it is impossible to compel a person to be religious, but there is an irreducible minimum of common values to which everyone must adhere. Otherwise, he said, we will not be able to remain one nation.

Enlarged Presidents Conference

The growth of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, and the return of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith to the National Community Relations Advisory Council are two developments that have served to make the Jewish community more adequate to respond to its needs.

Neither of these organizations are perfect solutions to the demand for unity in Jewish life, but they are what we have and what has developed and what acts for us. They cannot be ignored or displaced.

They can however be improved.

The NCRAC can be made more effective by the addition of the American Jewish Committee to its consultative process. We have the assurance of a top official of the Committee that he desires deeply to bring his agency into the NCRAC.

The Presidents Conference, as it is generally known, can also be made more responsive and responsible by a step, which the NCRAC early initiated, and which in our opinion led to the ADL's return, and will lead just as surely to the AJC's return.

The NCRAC's strength is its local community relations advisory councils which grew from a handful to over seventy in the last decade. This gave the NCRAC grass roots, and won to it the strength of the local Jewish communities.

By the same token, if the Presidents Conference were to add to it the presidents of the local federations, it would achieve precisely the same result — the Conference would gain in validity as a major instrument of the American Jewish community, and the community would give to the Conference the benefit of the kind of independent thinking you get when you go to the grass roots.

Wrong-Way Surveys II

Continuing the theme of the editorial of last week, we reprint below another survey of a Jewish community, this one also from the weekly column of Boris Smolar, editor-in-chief of The Jewish Telegraphic Agency.

This survey points up the inadequacy of this system of anonymous surveys conducted on a sporadic basis and then never given the kind of intensive study by experts which would put the results to the best use of the community. Note too, that this survey is highly encouraging, while the one printed last week, was at least to Mr. Smolar, most depressing.

To what extent do Jewish parents in this country demonstrate a desire for their children to acquire knowledge of Jewish matters? . . . To what extent do they want their children to remain Jewish and understand its meaning? . . . A sample survey conducted among parents in an Eastern city with an estimated Jewish population of 80,000 established that 96 percent of the children there, between the ages of 6 and 14, receive some kind of formal Jewish education. . . This high proportion is consistent with national trends. . . The parents who included Orthodox, Conservative and Reform Jews, also indicated the kind of Jewish education their children were receiving. . . About 51 percent attend schools requiring attendance on both weekday afternoon and a weekend morning; 27 percent attend Sunday schools only; 16 percent attend an all-day Jewish school; 4 percent weekday afternoons only; and 2 percent have private tutors at home. . . This is an exceptionally good picture. . . The parents interviewed were then asked: "How many years of Jewish schooling would you like your child to have? . . . Two-thirds of them gave figures above five years; 23 percent said "through Bar Mitzvah" or "through confirmation"; and 6 percent gave figures ranging between one and five years. . . This throws light on the aspirations of the parents for the Jewish education of their children. . . However, it is questionable whether many, or most, of these children will be exposed to this much Jewish education. . . It is considered possible, perhaps even probable, that for a variety of reasons the children will not receive as much Jewish education as their parents would wish them to get. . . One of the reasons is the yielding by parents and children alike the value of Jewish education for other values. . .

The EDITOR'S CHAIR...

There has been a great deal of comment throughout the Jewish community on Rabbi Sherwin T. Wine and his declaration that the traditional idea of God cannot be reconciled with scientific knowledge.

Some of this has appeared in the pages of the POST and OPINION, much in bulletins of rabbis, and a large proportion in sermons.

We thought that we might serve by giving you a rundown on the reactions we've observed from here and there.

Rabbi David Polish, of Evanston, Ill., takes a sane view in the following excerpts from his sermon:

"Yet, he does serve a positive purpose. He will compel us to examine our positions more thoroughly. In the first place, he harshly illuminates, because he is a Rabbi, 'the death of God' which is rampant in the world. Second, he compels those who have long evaded the issue to recognize that the question of theology is the central issue in Jewish life. By his radical and revolutionary act of rejecting any definition of the term 'God,' he has revealed what the real issue is. The chief problem is not one of supernaturalism or naturalism, but of deity on any terms. While the naturalists and the supernaturalists are quarreling, the total deniers are infiltrating the field of Jewish life and thought.

"The true crisis of Jewish existence is upon us. The sacred triangle of Judaism is being dismantled. Some are tearing away peoplehood; others are annihilating Torah. Now, from within the Rabbinate itself, God (by any definition) is being expelled. All that is left is the fading impression of a triangle which is vanishing, but which, like an extinguished light, has fixed itself on our retina. If Rabbi Wine has succeeded in alarming us, then he has performed God's work."

The current issue of The Jewish Observer, organ of the Agudath Israel of America, right wing Orthodox, heads an excerpt from The Reconstructionist editorial on Rabbi Wine, "The Pot Calls the Kettle Black," and then proceeds to take it out on Reform Judaism, in the following paragraph:

"Rabbi Sherwood T. Wine (the quotes are ours and Dr. Freehof's) has performed a service for American Jewry in demonstrating the operation of the logical principle of reductio ad absurdum in Reform theology. Having cast away the Torah it was inevitable that the Author of Torah would ultimately be rejected. Unfortunately, logic has hardly been a strong point in Reform thinking and so we suspect that the lesson of Wine will be lost on The Rationalist Association of America, better known as 'Reform' Judaism. Nevertheless, we fervently pray that some members of the association will seek to restore Torah to their 'Judaism' as they desire that Wine should restore the Almighty to his 'Judaism'."

Rabbi Daniel Jeremy Silver, who probably might appreciate it if we didn't identify him as the son of the late Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver has this view of Rabbi Wine and his doctrine:

"What is to be done? There are some who have rushed into print urging that we publicize the existence of this group and that they are not a Jewish group. I doubt if this would be a useful enterprise. There is no indication that they have denied what they are. Their publicity has been honest and they cannot be accused of false advertising. No one who joins them can be joining them under false pretenses. Moreover, I fear that any program to weed them out will mask from us what ought to be our major concern. How shall we explain this phenomena in Jewish life? What brought it about? Could it occur again? If so, why? Unfortunately I am firmly convinced that the existence of this little group is not an anomaly, but rather an almost predictable development in Jewish life. There has been a tow in our communities these past hundred years away from faith, away from theology, away from belief, towards a secular and humanistic orientation. Rabbi Wine's congregation is an elongated and exaggerated shadow of much which occurs routinely. Perhaps by seeing the illogical end result of so much of our own activity, we can bring ourselves up short, and do something about it."

Rabbi Nathaniel Share, of New Orleans, has this to say:

"We need to be less worried about one outspoken, if mistaken, rabbi than about the great number of practical atheists among us. They are the greater danger to Judaism. These are the people who, while affirming that they believe in God, live and act as though he did not exist. Their lives are empty of genuine religious content. If they are lured into the synagogue now and then, their prayers are perfunctory. If they send their children to the religious school, they nullify its influence at home. In their dealings with others, they guide themselves by the 'get-yours' ethics of the market-place, not by the ethics of Judaism. Such people — people who affirm their faith in God while denying him by their lives — are the real atheists in our midst."

And finally Rabbi Sidney H. Brooks of Omaha, views what has taken place thusly:

"Since we are not a dogmatic religion, proclaiming once and for all that we have the final truth, then we can accept the principal that all knowledge is tentative. Each day brings its new discoveries and new insights into the nature of the world and of human nature. Our faith must change. Our beliefs must change. Our concepts must change to fit new insights and to make the spirit of Judaism compatible with the changing role of Man in the World. Through it all we still believe that there runs a pattern that makes for increasing grandeur in the purposes of human fulfillment. And this some of us call 'God'. And to this God we must personally relate ourselves thru the service of the mitzvats and the love of our hearts.

"Let us then applaud Rabbi Wine, not for what he says, but for his courage to say it. Not for his conclusions, but for what he has done to make us think. We shall not excommunicate, we shall not chastise. We shall have no hearings of heresy. Rabbi Wine is responsible only to himself and to his congregation and ultimately his followers will determine the acceptability of his teaching."

Lest we leave you with a false impression in conclusion, we should point out that not one rabbi has risen to side with Rabbi Wine. Most of the comments have been harsh, and direct. Some, as you've seen above, have been more understanding.

Rabbi Answers 'What Is A Religious Teacher?'

By RABBI MAURICE DAVIS
Lesson for today:

WHAT IS A RELIGIOUS SCHOOL TEACHER?

A Religious School teacher (and the "he" means "she" as well as "he") is a person too young for his years, and too old for his dreams, and too much in love with too many kids. He lives in the world of the grown-ups, with his heart in the world of the young. He spends hours of studying for minutes of teaching, and the rest of the week he worries — on and off — about the 20-odd kids that are once-in-a-while students.

He worries about their work, their welfare, their future. . . and their parents. As a matter of fact, he worries about himself because he has two loves. The kids he tries to teach, and the Judaism he tries to teach them. He wonders if he can ever transmit to them the greatness and the grandeur that he himself barely can grasp.

HE TEACHES ON Sunday mornings, but he checks in on Saturday nights. That is when his mind begins to drift, and his thoughts begin to wander.

He keeps this to himself, of course, for his friends would scarcely understand. How can he tell other grown-ups about the wondrously wise, or wondrously silly, or wondrously wondrous things that his youngsters say and do and are? No one completely grown-up could ever comprehend.

He gropes his way awake each Sunday morning to begin again that incredible task of teaching. In equal measure he attempts to pour in (instruct), and to draw out (educate), hoping somehow that his two loves will meet, and learn to like each other.

HE BUSIES himself with at-

Frank Praises an American Jewish Body

By M. Z. FRANK

About or nearly ten years ago, when Herb Friedman took over the United Jewish Appeal, he started worrying about an educational program. "Where will I get contributors to the UJA ten years from now," he told me then, "if I don't begin to educate them now?"

He began trying, experimenting, planning. It was while touring the border areas in Israel in 1956, before the Sinai Campaign, that I heard from the driver about Herb's troubles with his own "State Department." There was a natural reluctance on the part of leaders and bureaucrats to depart from routine.

HOW FAR THERE was any internal struggle — or if there really was any — I don't know. And yet he persisted. And now we see two educational programs quietly carried on, without too much fanfare, but emanating from the same building and even the same offices as the United Jewish Appeal. Both programs are pregnant with great possibilities:

One is the campaign for building an endowment fund. The other is the tour of younger Israeli intellectuals through the campuses in this country.

As these lines are being typed, Shulamit Aloni and Shlomo Avineri are both touring different campuses. Both of them represented Israel last summer during the Dialogue organized by the American Jewish Congress. On reading the account of the proceedings at that Dialogue in the Congress Bi-Weekly, I said in this column that it was much more significant than the American Jewish press — or, for that matter, the Israeli press — has credited it.

A FEW REMARKS in a conversation with Mrs. Aloni have bolstered my positive opinion about the Dialogue. It certainly proved to be a much more intelligent, open-minded, honest and fruitful forum for discussing Israel - Diaspora relations than the so much more pretentious and so very much more expensive and so very dull and unproductive World Zionist Congress.

The project of bringing young intellectuals from Israel to tour the campuses is officially a joint venture of the UJA and the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation. But when I wanted to contact Arie Eliav, who toured the campus last year, I had to get in touch with Abe Hyman at the UJA, and this time I met Shulamit Aloni in the office of Zelig Chinitz — also at the UJA. Abe Hyman, who made a survey of Israel education, is now working with Ralph Goldman on the Educational Building Fund—sponsored by the UJA).

IN THE LATEST issue of the monthly magazine "Moznayim," to reach me from Tel Aviv, I read two editorial notices about the 26th Zionist Congress. Neither is very complimentary. But that would be news only to the official apologists. What strikes one as odd is that underlying all the criticism of the Zionist movement is the basic assumption that what the World Zionist Organization cannot or will not do, no other agency can or will do.

One notice even speaks of the Brith Ivrit Olamith as the agency to do anything for the dissemination of Hebrew in the Diaspora. That, of course, is the sheerest nonsense. The great historic miracle of the rebirth of the Hebrew language in Israel has been going on without the benefit of that "World Union for Hebrew." And whatever much or little — depending how you look at it — there is of Hebrew activity in America has just as little to do with that Organization as the revival of Hebrew in Israel. But some people will insist on reasoning by labels rather than by reality.

THE BRITH IVRITH OLAMITH is a small hoax perpetrated on the small group of old-time Hebrewists in Israel. The World Zionist Organization and its affiliates are a big hoax perpetrated on a much larger segment of the Israeli public. By controlling to a very large extent the means of communications between Israel and the Diaspora, by exploiting old loyalties, prejudices and party interests and a good deal of patronage, the Zionist leaders and bureaucrats have succeeded in convincing a large segment of the Israeli public that the organized Zionists are the only ones who really care about Israel and Jewish survival in the Diaspora and that only through the Zionist movement can there come an aliyah from the West. Many Zionist leaders believe their own nonsense, even when they are familiar with the facts, which are in direct contradiction to their claims.

HERE IS A LITTLE gem: Mr. Pinhas Lander of Tel Aviv who, as "Toshav" (Inhabitant) has been the regular Israeli correspondent of "Hadoar" for two decades, informs us in the last issue of that weekly that both wings of the Liberal Party in Israel (the one-time "General Zionists" and the one-time "Progressives") have a large following in the Diaspora.

What is that following? The ZOA is affiliated with the World Confederation of General Zionists of which Emanuel Neumann is President. But the ZOA had to sell part of the land of the ZOA House in Tel-Aviv to get some money for its current expenses here. In fact, the ZOA, even in its heyday fifteen years ago, was in no position to do anything for the General Zionists in Israel.

THE AMERICAN JEWISH League for Israel, which has no listed address or telephone number, is affiliated with the World Confederation of General Zionists jointly chaired by Rose Halprin and Israel Goldstein. Hadassah, of course, is affiliated with it, but out of 330,000 members of Hadassah, how many know about their "affiliation" and their role as "followers" of Moshe Kol's political party in Israel?

Mr. Lander is an excellent correspondent. But I should like to repeat to him here in public what I once told him in Tel Aviv in private: Tell us all about Israel, but don't try to give us any information about what is going on in America.

Israel needs at least one strong political party to rival Mapai. It is not good for a country to have only one strong party. But a healthy strong party cannot be built up by the hoax and self-delusion of a "following" in the Diaspora.

Alpert Gives Forecast of Vote 6 Months Hence

By CARL ALPERT

HAIFA — Elections for Israel's sixth Knesset, to be held late this year, and the excited preparations leading up to these elections, should be watched closely by all of Israel's friends overseas. The results may have a profound effect on the future of the country, and may pave the way for changes of far-reaching significance.

There have been no major changes to speak of in policy or principle during the seventeen years since the creation of the State. Through one coalition or another, the moderate Socialist party, Mapai, has dominated the scene. The pattern of Israel's policies today — social, economic, foreign — are for the most part a reflection of Mapai's program, with such minor adjustments as required to meet the expedients of amicable coalition.

AS THE ELECTION fever begins to mount, it becomes clear that there are new factors in this year's campaign which may presage drastic changes.

First of these is the unmistakable evidence that Mapai has been slipping. The internal dissension — the rift between Ben Gurion and Eshkol — is not responsible so much as the elementary fact that a party which has been in power for seventeen years begins to lose the magic of its appeal to the majority of voters who are unaffiliated and uncommitted. "It's time for a change" is a powerful slogan, growing in effectiveness with each passing year.

In an attempt to shore up its electoral strength Mapai has entered into an "alignment" with Achdut Ha-Avodah, a party further to the left. Though small in size, the latter group will undoubtedly bolster up the idealistic wing of Mapai, and prevent the loss of the youth vote, which has been complaining that Mapai is losing its Socialism.

A MAPAI WHICH returns to power wedded to Achdut Ha-Avodah must inevitably veer sharply left in its economic policies. What this means by way of attitude to private capital, tax levels, labor interests, etc. can be detected, at least in part, from a reading of Achdut Ha-Avodah's own press. Moshe Dayan, himself a Mapai leader but unhappy about the alignment, is one of those who warns that this tie-up must inevitably tip Mapai to the left.

On the other hand it appears that for the first time there will be in the lists a "conservative" party which can command enough support to make itself heard and felt as an effective opposition. Hitherto a right-of-center party has (with a single exception) never been able to muster more than 13.7 per cent of the total vote cast. Union of the Liberals with Herut should theoretically now give the new group a minimum strength of 25 per cent, not an insignificant figure in a race against a dozen or more other parties. The figure could well be much higher.

IN THE PRESENT political constellation in Israel it is impossible to conceive of anything other than a labor government, but a sizeable and well-organized opposition could be a healthy influence in this democracy.

The dissipation of the popular vote among the many parties will undoubtedly once again mean that no single party will have a majority. Once again coalition will be necessary, and once again the only cohesive, politically dependable group will be the religious bloc. The latter, if they can overcome their own internal differences (!) should account for a solid 15 per cent or more, the difference needed to give Mapai another five years in power.

These are the political realities of Israel's unfortunate system of proportional representation. This is the system which Ben Gurion has been struggling to change. But the discarding of electoral reform was one of the prices demanded of Mapai by Achdut Ha-Avodah, and Eshkol was willing to pay.

PRELIMINARY FORECAST, then, more than half a year before the elections: Mapai again in power; more Socialist tendencies; balance of power still in the hands of the Orthodox; a strong and articulate conservative opposition.

Incidentally, a small-scale but instructive preview of the national poll will be gained from the results of the Histadrut elections to be held in May. Perhaps fearful of what such results would show, the Eshkol group in Mapai has been trying to have the Histadrut vote postponed until after the national elections.

Bridging Space Between Educated, Temple

By MYRON SCHOEN

One of the most gnawing problems facing the spiritual leadership of the contemporary synagogue is the ever widening gulf between the more highly educated American Jews and their faith. It is no longer a question of anti-Semitism or an unwillingness to identify themselves as Jews. Their aloofness from the institutions of religious Judaism is generally based upon two factors — a belief that science has refuted much of Jewish theology and that organized religion as represented by the synagogue is an outmoded and clumsy relic of the past.

Despite this generally held belief by so many of the best educated Jews, practically every congregation has scores of these men and women on their membership rolls. Scientists, medical doctors, dentists, attorneys, university professors of all disciplines, have joined the synagogue, entered their children in religious schools, but remain around the periphery of involvement and activity.

A GOODLY number look with disdain upon typical synagogue activities, while a few are highly vocal in their condemnation. Rabbis have frequently told me that they have been able to develop contact and rapport with them as individuals, but have not been successful in inducing them to play any role in congregational life.

I was reminded of this void between the highly-educated and our synagogue by two incidents.

First, I was asked by my brother, a physician, whether I had ever read a book titled "Search the Scriptures" which was published in 1963. J. P. Lippincott Co. The author is Robert B. Greenblatt, M. D., Professor and Chairman of the Department of Endocrinology at the Medical College of Georgia. I found its 124 pages fascinating and exciting. The author readily admits that his book is "not at all of a theologian. . . but of a physician and endocrinologist, who considers the Bible the world's greatest literary work, and who believes that the better informed we are of the past the wiser we are in the present and humbler against the future."

JUST AS MAN has turned to his religion to find his place in the cosmos, so Dr. Greenblatt feels that one of the themes of his lively book is an attempt to find the place of modern medicine and today's physician in this scientific era of the twentieth century.

"Yet the status of the physician, always the peer of priests, judges, and scholars, may be lower than it was a half century ago," states the physician-author. In a particularly interesting chapter Dr. Greenblatt deals with the passage which is found in both the old and new Testaments, "What is man, that thou art mindful of him?" and ruminates upon the fact that man has two facets that have ever troubled us — his soul and his body. "Man is body and soul. Each influences the other. Man must rise above the common herd, the sheep, the beast in the field. Glandular and genetic disorders distort the image of man . . . Man must indeed strive to be only 'a little lower than the angels'," writes Dr. Greenblatt.

THE SECOND incident that attracted my attention to this chasm between the educated and the synagogue, was the receipt of a special service held at Temple Israel in Miami, Florida a few months ago. It was a Friday evening worship service for members of the "healing professions" — physicians, dentists, nurses, etc. In the service Rabbi Joseph Narot wove the many splendid passages of our scriptures and our prayer book that deal with the healing arts and their practitioners.

It was a well deserved tribute to the men and women who toil to prevent and cure the bodily ills of our people. Let us hope that those who attended and those who hear about the service will readily recognize that there are others who toil equally hard and sacrificially to prevent and mend the ills of the soul.

RABBI NAROT'S service made me think that maybe all the blame for the distance between the scientist and the learned from our faith and its institutions is not all one sided.

How much is the synagogue really doing to win them to the fold? And, are we doing the right things? In addition to special services for physicians and lawyers, can we not start study groups apart from our regular adult education sessions with these men and women in which we can plumb the relationship between our religious faith and their vocations? Certainly we must have in our larger congregations such men as Dr. Greenblatt of Augusta, Ga., who can, with their rabbis, launch such an undertaking?

Shooting by Syria Daily Occurrence

JERUSALEM — Almost daily fighting on Israel's border with Syria has created a tense situation.

A young Israeli tractor driver who died of wounds after one of the Syrian attacks was mourned throughout Israel.

Shot for shot Israel was answering the guns of the Syrians, and each new attack brought a response which left no doubt in the minds of the Syrians that they continue only at their own peril.

The concern is, however, that any one of the unprovoked outbursts of shooting by Syria may do such damage that Israel will have no alternative but to respond in kind, thus escalating the war probability.

In one of the exchanges, whether by design or by accident, equipment Syria was using to divert the headwaters of the Jordan was demolished by Israeli fire. Tractors and other heavy equipment was rendered useless by direct hits.

NAMES IN THE NEWS

Conservatism Averted Split Into 2 'Nations'

CLEVELAND — The view that Conservative Judaism has prevented Reform and Orthodoxy from splitting into "two nations" was expressed here by Dr. Simon Greenberg.

The vice chancellor of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America credited the moderating influence of Conservative Judaism as being the link between the left and right extremes in Jewish religious life.

The Cleveland Jewish News reported that Dr. Greenberg told a businessmen's Torah luncheon that he felt that the position of the Conservative movement was not to be absolutely clear — but to tolerate a certain amount of confusion, thus trying to bring both polarities to bear on an issue.

Prophecy Chills Him

Harry Golden recalls with a chill down his spine that on the Lawrence Spivak program in 1960 he made the statement that: "Only a Southern-er will finally settle this racial problem, and it will probably be Lyndon Johnson". Dr. Joseph Prinz, president of the American Jewish Congress, has returned to the Germany he fled in 1937, at the invitation of the Senate of West Berlin. A handsome cultural center seating 1300 persons will be erected in Haifa by the three Daroff Brothers, Sam, Michael and Joseph.

With the Rabbis

Rabbi Samuel Wohl, of Wise Temple, Cincinnati, will be feted with a 3-day celebration in honor of his 70th birthday. A national figure, Rabbi Wohl has been president of the Labor Zionist Organization of American. Rabbi Sol Landau co-rabbi of Park Synagogue in Cleveland, has been named spiritual leader of Beth David Congregation in Miami. Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel has been named Fostick visiting professor at the Union Theological Seminary for the academic year 1965-66. The Rabbinical Board of Greater Pittsburgh honored Rabbi Edmund Neiss, of the Tree of Life Congregation of McKeesport, with a farewell luncheon. Rabbi Neiss has accepted the position with the Floral Park Jewish Center of Long Island, N.Y.

Appointments

Dr. David G. Saltin, Superintendent of Schools in New Rochelle, has been named to the new post of executive director of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York.

Morris Lapides has been named executive director of the St. Paul United Fund and Council. He is currently assistant executive director of the Federation of Jewish Community Services of Montreal. Sam Hunter, professor of Art History at Brandeis, has been named director of the Jewish Museum.

Husband, Wife Team

The Savannah Jewish community wants to make sure that it's 1965 combined United Jewish Appeal and Federation campaign for $130,000 does not fall below its goal. Consequently when David Rosenzweig was named general chairman, it persuaded Mrs. Rosenzweig to take the chairmanship of the women's division or vice versa. Both Rosenzweigs do not limit their activities to the Jewish community. David is president of the Savannah Public Library and Ethyl on the board of the League of Women Voters.

Expresses Shame

Celebration Move Angers Ben-Gurion

TEL AVIV — Charges are flying over shift of the annual Independence Day parade from Jerusalem to Tel Aviv.

Ex-Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion expressed "regret and shame" that the exercises were moved.

ACTUALLY the parade has been split into two — the formal half to be held in Jerusalem and the "show-of-might" in Tel Aviv.

Ben-Gurion was attacked for his views, the charge being hurled that they were politically-motivated.

BECAUSE JERUSALEM abuts on the Jordanian border, extensive aerial flights are prohibitive, Jordan has repeated complaints made in the past when the parades have been held in Jerusalem, claiming a violation of the truce agreement.

HASSIDIC RABBI IN STREIMAL RECOMMENDED FOR INAUGURAL

LONG BRANCH, N.J. — When a hassidic rabbi, "beard, capote, shtreimal, payas and all" is selected to deliver an invocation at the inauguration of a president, "then we should know that we are confident about our present, and not ashamed of our past".

This was the view expressed by Rabbi Alexander Graubart, of Congregation B'nai Sholom (Conservative) in the synagogue's bulletin, The Shofar.

Presenting the theme that brotherhood "requires that we become confident as Jews...not shedding of our Jewish identity", Rabbi Graubart said it was grand to see a rabbi take part in the inaugural ceremony of our nation's President. "Possibly it will be even more inspiring if next time we present a rabbi who represents, not the most assimilated segment of our people, but one who represents those who have not yielded. I think it would be good to see a hassidic rabbi on that exalted platform. Beard, capote, shtreimal, payas and all. Then we would know that we are confident about our present, and not ashamed of our past".

Tibetans Taught Trades by Jews

NEW YORK (P-O) — How Jewish experience in meeting the needs of deprived Jews will be put to use for Tibetan refugee youth who probably never saw a Jew was outlined by the American ORT Federation here. ORT is the Organization for Rehabilitation through training.

THIS IS NOT the first time ORT has been asked to provide its knowhow in teaching vocational skills to non-Jewish people.

The new project will be located in Teheran, Persia, scene of a number of ORT trade schools for Jewish youth.

The first group of 15 Tibetans, ages 19-21, has already arrived in Teheran.

After two years of study, they will return to India. If all goes well, they will be replaced at the Teheran school by a second echelon of future teachers.

THE INTERNATIONAL CHARACTER of the project marks it off as unique. The Norwegian Refugee Council, in cooperation with the United Nations Office of the High Commissioner for Refugees, will defray the cost of the training project. The Iranian authorities have approved the stay of the youths. The Indian government has extended their passports. The Dalai Lama has given his approval. And the project itself will be carried out in a Jewish institution of recognized experience.

Kansas City Area Barred To Jews

KANSAS CITY — Jews have been prohibited from buying homes in Northeast Johnson County, it was revealed in testimony before the Kansas Senate in Topeka.

The Kansas City Jewish Chronicle reported that Mrs. Nathan Schechter told the lawmakers that in some areas the owners of adjoining property must pass on sales to Jewish buyers. At the same time she testified that some development and mortgage companies will not hold mortgages on a home if the purchaser is Jewish.

Spanish Jews Get Legal Status

MADRID — Legal status has been granted to Jews of Spain for the first time since 1492. Application had been made 10 years ago, but it was in the past few months that Jewish leaders were received by Gen. Franco, who promised sympathetic consideration of their request.

At Tel Aviv Shoreline

To Lift 150 Acres From Sea

TEL AVIV — The Tel Aviv seashore is expected to be considerably beautified by an ambitious land-reclamation project which will lift 150 acres out of the Mediterranean by the fill-in process.

The new areas will be used to construct a promenade, a piazza and a 75-acre island with bridges connecting it to the shore. Anchorages for sports and pleasure craft will also be provided as well as protected bathing beaches.

Another feature of the program is a broad avenue connecting Tel Aviv and Jaffa.

500,000 Women Back Johnson

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A new alignment in the Jewish community has appeared as practically all national Jewish organizations have joined in commending President Johnson's proposed legislation assuring the right to vote to all U.S. citizens.

The newest group is composed of 500,000 Jewish women representing the views of three national Jewish women's organizations. They are the Women's Branch of the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of America, the National Women's League of the United Synagogue of America (Conservative) and the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods (Reform).

American Chain To Run Caesarea

CAESAREA — American knowhow it is hoped will do for an outstanding Israeli hotel and resort area what two previous managements have been able to accomplish.

For the third time, now, The Caesarea, one of Israel's newest and most luxurious resort hotels, is changing managements. The Hotel Corporations of America, will operate the famed resort at this historical spot. The Caesarea, which together with its golf course, the only one in Israel, has lost money for Baron Edmond de Rothschild, its owner, from the first day it opened.

Forward Writers Belittle Reform

By RABBI SAMUEL SILVER

In column after column some Forward writers belittle Reform Judaism. One Forward man, Rabbi Aaron B. Shurin, intimated that an atheist rabbi is hardly an exception in Reform Judaism. On the other hand, another Forward writer, the famous Isaac Bashevis Singer, who writes under the name Isaac Warshawsky, loves Reform Jews, especially the rabbis.

In a recent piece he describes his visit to the Cincinnati branch of the Hebrew Union College and he is full of praise not only for the cordial reception he got but for the Jewishness of the school. He attended a Talmud class and he mingled with the pros and the students and he found them deeply attached to, highly knowledgeable in Judaism.

TRUE, HE ADMITS, his late father would have regarded Jews who worship without hats as goyim, but the Reformers

Singer knows are nothing of the kind. Actually, says Singer, his late father would have regarded American Orthodox rabbis as goyim, too, for they are really Reformers who differ from the admitted Reformers only in degree.

Reform has been charged with being Karaite, but Singer denies that too, for the Karaites would not accept the commentaries on the Bible, but at the Hebrew Union College they study those commentaries with respect and attention.

SINGER HAS high praise for Dr. Nelson Glueck, president of the seminary, who is familiar with Yiddish, and for Dr. Jacob Marcus, the seminary's history chief, who proved very congenial, as did the rest of the faculty and student body.

Pondering on the seeming departures from traditionalism on the part of Reform, Singer falls back on an unexpected application of the French proverb to the effect that the more things change the more they are the same. True, Reform seems a far cry from tradition, but the Reformers are still warm Jews and if only his late father had gotten to know them, he would have loved them, Singer assures us.

OBITUARY

Frank Goldman, 74, Headed B'nai B'rith

LOWELL, Mass. — More than 500 persons attended services last week (Mar. 18) for Frank Goldman, former president of B'nai B'rith, who died of a heart attack at his home here. He was 74.

Attending the services were B'nai B'rith representatives—all long-time friends and colleagues of Mr. Goldman — from many parts of the country.

Mr. Goldman was elected president of B'nai B'rith in 1947 and reelected in 1950. During that period he worked closely with other leaders of the American Jewish community for the resettlement of Jewish survivors of the Nazi holocaust, for the postwar reconstruction of Jewish life in Western Europe and for the establishment of the state of Israel.

Mr. Goldman has been honorary president of B'nai B'rith since 1953 and a member of its board of governors, the organization's highest policy body, for 24 years.

Label A. Katz, president of B'nai B'rith, said in a statement:

"We deeply mourn the passing of Frank Goldman, who served B'nai B'rith with great distinction as a wise and esteemed leader in the national councils of the organization for more than a generation. His dedication to the advancement of the American Jewish community and to the welfare of the Jewish people throughout the world were a focus of his life. In all of his endeavors he left a lasting imprint."

Booing Aids Knesset Pickets

JERUSALEM — When spectators booed police who began to tear up signs of picketers in front of the Knesset, police desisted.

The picketers, members of the Anti-Nazi Fighters, were protesting approval of diplomatic ties with West Germany.

The police first attempted to push the demonstrators to the side and tore up a few of the placards. No arrests were made, but police took the names of several of the demonstrators.

The picketers, members of the Anti-Nazi Fighters, were protesting approval of diplomatic ties with West Germany.

Key to U. S. Said In U. S. Jews

JERUSALEM — A delegation of the American Jewish Committee heard President Zalman Shazar assert that the political weight of Jewish public opinion in the United States is a key to Israel's security, which is in the hands of the American government.

President Shazar told the visitors that they can play a most significant role in the maintenance of Middle East peace.

Editor, POST & OPINION:

In his opening statement, Dr. Rodin observes that Rabbi Wine's views "made me abandon my usual polite indifference" and identifies himself as a spokesman for the scientific and perhaps the Jewish community. Having thus established his competence to pass judgment on a mere Rabbi, Dr. Rodin proceeds to launch a vicious and

As a Jew and a scientist, I deeply resent the tone and the implications of the letter. Dr. Rodin certainly is not a spokesman for either the scientific or the Jewish community, nor does he have the minimal qualifications. He exhibits neither the dispassionate objectivity and respect for differing opinions which characterize the former, nor the charity and sense of fair play which have long been the

I remind Dr. Rodin that the privilege of invoking scientific authority carries with it the obligation of scientific ethics and I suggest that in rushing into print next time he abandon only his indifference.

How many synagogues are there that do not live up to their contractual obligations to their rabbis?

We should read between the lines of Rabbi Wine's statements concerning God because we need something to wake us up from our dilemma of thinking about the Almighty Dollar as to concentrating on Almighty God and his teachings.

Editor: POST and OPINION:

By the same token, of applying personal preference, it should by now be obvious that a vast host of Soviet Jews, suffering the oppression of Communist tyranny in that benighted land, have made it unmistakably clear that they do not feel at home in the USSR, but consider the State of Israel to be their true homeland. Under the Communist form of tyranny, as we know, Zionist ideology and organization is outlawed. Nevertheless, it would be a fair presumption that at the least hundreds of thousands, if not in excess of a million Jews would emigrate from the Soviet Union to the State of Israel, if given that chance.

As a member of the Washington Board of The American Council of Judaism, I, for one, would champion the Jewish Agency's demands with refer-NCSY, as it is popularly called, has over 320 chapters and 18 regions throughout the country. Last year NCSY conducted fifty-two regional youth conclaves in every part of the United States and Canada.

Why the unnamed "Mexico City Orthodox Congregation" was unaware of NCSY, or why the officials of the Texas-Oklahoma National Federation of Temple Youth (Reform) failed to inform them is beyond me to reveal.

Let us hope that there was no more involved here than woe-ful ignorance of the facts.

If Rabbi Nathaniel Share, to whom I am sending a copy of this letter, would care to reveal to me the individuals involved in the 'Orthodox synagogue' I will be happy to relate this information to the director of the Southern Region of NCSY who will invite them to join the many thousands of young people to whom NCSY is very much in existence.

Editor, POST and OPINION

It occurs to me that there resides a serious fallacy in the structure which Rabbi Wine has erected in his efforts to entomb God in oblivion. The fallacy

Our entire confrontation with the arts, our ability to know love and sorrow, as well as our ability to reach the Almighty derive from the validity of intuitive, non-rational, experiences. To pretend that man operates in his world on only the rational level is to deny much of the world's history and all of the world's esthetics.

Dr. Rodin (P-O March 12) has correctly indicated the fallacy in attempting to apply the tools and reasoning of science outside of the discipline for which the tools were created. I am going further in contending that a serious error in logic lies at the heart of Rabbi Wine's attempt logically to approach the entire issue.

FLASH! It's tonite (Sat.), the fabulous IHC Sisterhood-Brotherhood "spectacular"! It will have "everything" (and I do mean everything) to make you glad you came! It will start off with a spaghetti dinner, and the wonderful music of Steve Rose and his orchestra for dancing, and the highlights of the evening the "show of shows"! It is simply hilarious! And its all "local" talent! Next week when I mention their names, you wouldn't believe it, so you better be there and see for yourself! Please don't miss this affair! (A reminder to the show committee! The Harcourt and Spring Mill school are having their PTA affair the same night, and so if possible, start your show a "little later" than usual, as many parents will rush over after their kids affair at the school to catch the show!) — FLASH! The Center's pool will be open May 29! (Better get your photo taken at the Center immediately, for your membership card! Then you will be able to "get in the swim" of things!) — FLASH! The Center's "Sports Banquet" on Sun. April 4 will have a terrific guest speaker besides other celebrities! He is Jerry Oliver, the coach of the new State Champs — Washington High School! Also prominent sports writers and Allan Cohen, the Board Ripple high basketball star! (The Center was helpful to Allan for basketball!) It will be a great sporting event! Parents, bring the kids! Orchids to Boynton Robson the athletic director for a great season of basketball activities besides other sports! — This was cute! Last week, I columned "The stork gave me the 'initials' of three prospective customers to whom he hopes to make 'delivers' sometime soon! I received five (yes) 5) calls, as to "how did I know"! And the punch line? Not one of the five calls were the ones "I" meant! I get more "leads" that way, and more people will get children! — FLASH! Again it will be the popular WFBM Bernie Herman who will present the MCA closed circuit theater-TV showing of the 500 Mile Race! Theatres all over the country (except here will be a blackout) will show the 500 Mile Race live! Good boy Bernie! (Say Bernie I was on the TV once! I had to hang a picture on the wall!) (OUCH) — Congrats to the lovely Karen Schenkman (of the Seymour Schenkman's). Has just been selected by the language dept. of I.U. to study at the University of Madrid, in Spain for her Junior year! A language major that specializes in Spanish also Italian and German! Will leave in Aug! A beauty with brains! — The B'nai B'rith bowling banquet will be at the Broadmoor! — My "unsung heroes" of the week! The Sunday School teachers! They do an important job and do it well! — Happy 24th anniversary to the Lester Budds! (April 2) — Welcome newcomers from Dalton, Ga. They are Dr. Frank Weine and family! Very congenial and charming! — FLASH! Our own Rabbi Maurice Davis will be the "Roastmaster" at the Indianapolis Press Clubs 1965 Gridiron Dinner April 10 at the Indiana Roof Ballroom! A real honor! Last year, at the Gridiron festival, Rabbi Davis gave the invocation! Now hear this! This is the first time it ever happened! He received terrific applause for his invocation! I like this! Last year Rabbi Davis gave "divine" guidance and this year he will give them the "devil"! (as Roastmaster) — Happy birthday to Mrs. Jay (Sharon) Doner! — I just saw a Bikini bathing suit sale for ladies! Never has so much been asked for so little! (That's what you call "Bare" facts!) — The popular Sam Mantels just returned from a winter vacation in Mexico City! I love them! (Did you hear about the couple who went to Miami for the winter and got it?) — At the Beth-El Father and Sons day last Sunday (It was a swell affair), one of the entertainment skits was put on by the WFBM Gordon Pipers! They all play bagpipes! And one of the Pipers was our own genial Dr. Mort Alpert! He had learned to play the bagpipes here, and is a regular! Very good too! — Ladies like this! Husbands are all alike! They just have different faces, so that wives can tell them apart! — Pureto Rico entertained the Sid Feldmans, the Joe Nahmias, and the Morris Bernsteins! — It was our own Marvin Maron who was the star in the Torch Bearers production "Richard III"! You were great, Marv! — That familiar looking fellow that is manager of the Graham Electronic Audio Department is Jules Marx! Helps many organizations with their activities! — FLASH! Great news! The charming Mrs. Ben (Mildred Kraft) Ashkenazi is next years Purim Ball chairman! Best of luck! A suggestion! I repeat! How about a real old fashion Purim Ball, with booths, contest booths, food booths etc! Since the JEA is for "all" let "all" organizations who are really local community minded, participate! Mildred, why not call a meeting sometime, and ask each club and organization to send a representative and talk it over! (Now is the time for all groups to come to the aid of the party (JEA) that helps the kids!) It will bring good will and enjoyment, to the community! It will be a "painless" but fun-derful way to raise money! The question, "Are we over-organized" will be answered by how many groups would like to help in "one local community" project! Don't listen to the "It can't be done" group, Mil! For a worthy cause, it should be done! Now off my soap box! — Know some one like this? "You realize I wouldn't say anything about her unless it's good, and boy is this good!" — The Al Rubenstein and the Mel Lefkowitz went to Chicago last week for the same reason but two different places! Bar Mitzvahs! — FLASH!

FLASH! Last week I told about an unfortunate misunderstanding that will make two of the really big affairs happen on the same night, May 2! It's the terrific teen-age "Stunt-night" and the City of Hopes dinner-dance and show! (This show too will be an all local talent show, and will be fantastic and terrific! The Bagel Broads will be back! More later!) May I suggest, since no chance of change, that the City of Hope's show start a little later, because many parents who want to see their kids in action, will also want to join the fun at the City of Hope affair! And the stunt nite affair will start early! (Prediction! The Stunt Nite Skits will be real cute and there will not be any two standing rooms together) (crowd)! I hear the judges will be very prominent TV and Radio personnel! I repeat it was an unfortunate misunderstanding about May 2! — Congrats to Earl Harris! Made 1st V.P. of the Ind. Retail Council! A real honor when you know there are over 3,000 members! — Fred and Sid Tuchman went to the Cleaners convention in Atlantic City! It was business, but they also made it a pleasure by taking their lovely wives along! (Say Fred & Sid, I hear that cleaners are getting 10 times more ladies pants than mens, which is proof that wom-

Bi-Focal Look At Ecumenical Council Slated

Dr. Joseph Lichten of New York, and the Rev. Raymond Bosler will participate in a discussion entitled "The Ecumenical Council — Two Views".

This bi-focal look at the Ecumenical Council will take place at Brebeuf Preparatory School on Wednesday evening, March 31, at 8:30 p.m. The discussion is sponsored by Indianapolis Lodge 58 of B'nai B'rith and the Indianapolis District Council of Catholic Men.

Father Bosler has been editor of The Criterion since it was founded as the official Catholic weekly for the Archdiocese of Indianapolis in October, 1960. He was recently named to a second three-year term as a member of the Mayor's Commission on Human Rights. He is also a member of the State Advisory Committee of the United States Commission on Civil Rights. He recently returned from the third session of the Second Vatican Council where he served as advisor to the Most Rev. Paul C. Schulte, Archbishop of Indianapolis. While attending the Council, Father Bosler was named an expert, or council advisor, to assist the Council Fathers in their deliberations. In January 1963, he was named pastor of St. Thomas Aquinas Church, Indianapolis.

Dr. Joseph L. Lichten was born in Poland and received a degree of Doctor of Law from the University of Warsaw. A former diplomat attached to the Embassy of the Polish government in exile in Washington, D.C., he left his post and became an American citizen when the Communists gained control of Poland. Since 1945, he has directed ADL's Department of Intercultural Affairs. Under his leadership, the department has co-sponsored and participated in Catholic-Jewish conferences throughout the country. His articles on Catholic-Jewish relations and intergroup problems have appeared in various national magazines and Catholic publications.

Dr. Lichten was in Rome during the 1963 session of the Ecumenical Council, representing

Spain Recognizes Jewish Community After 500 Years

London (WNS) Reports reaching here from Spain have revealed that the Franco Government has given official recognition to the Jewish community of Madrid. This is the first time in nearly 500 years, ever since the Jewish expulsion from Spain at the end of the fifteenth century that a Spanish Government has given its approval to the existence of the Jewish religion in that country.

Similar recognition of the Jewish community of Barcelona, Spain's second city, is now expected. The Jewish community of Madrid, it is reported, has been asked by the Government to change its name from "Comunidad Israelita" to "Comunidad Hebreo" so as to indicate its non-identification with the State of Israel, which is not as yet recognized by the Spanish Government.

all new — for '65!

8-DAY MENU PLANNER

Not only menus for all eight days of Passover, but many choice recipes to delight your family and guests!

Passover is the oldest of Jewish holidays. For over 3,000 years we have observed it with joy and thanksgiving; it marked the end of a dark period of slavery and set ablaze a torch of liberty and freedom that we were to carry proudly aloft down through the centuries.

The holiday is called "pass-over" as a remembrance of the final miracle in Egypt when the Almighty destroyed every first-born among the Egyptians but passed over the homes of the Israelites.

The Seder marks the beginning of Passover and means "order," for there is a certain order we follow in the celebration of Passover around the table. Some of the practices are very ancient, dating back to the days of the Temple. The table is decked in gleaming white, the candles cast a warm, flickering glow, and the proud wine cups stand ready to play their part in the annual drama of Passover.

When the Israelites were hurrying out of Egypt, they had to snatch up the bread they were baking before it was leavened. That is why Passover is often called the Feast of Unleavened Bread, which is matzo. Since 1888 Manischewitz has been the world's largest producers of matzos. From our block-long modern bakery, matzos are shipped throughout the United States and Canada and into many foreign countries. Many other products besides matzos bear the Manischewitz name. (See the shopping list on the back cover.) These are all top-quality foods, strictly kosher for Passover. Not only do they add to your holiday enjoyment, but they save countless hours of preparation in your kitchen.

Manischewitz brightens your Passover two ways: first, by making available many fine foods, and second, by greatly shortening preparation-time in your kitchen. When you do your Passover shopping, always look for the time-honored name:
